

Painting and Decorating

'I love all the nitty gritty chemistry parts of painting. I love seeing the students develop the same enthusiasm and passion that I have. It's a really beautiful job and I'm really enjoying doing it.'

Anouska

Painting and Decorating Tutor

What is your position and what do you teach?

I'm one of the tutors for the New Zealand Certificate in Construction Trade Skills (Level 3) Painting and Decorating programme. Over the 17 weeks of the programme, we equip students with the skills to enter the painting industry with confidence.

What are the main components of the programme?

One of the biggest components is the allied trades project. That's all the practical stuff in the workshop, where students work on a cubicle that's kind of like a mini house. They practice prep work, learn all the paint systems and types of paint, paint a door, and learn wallpapering and spraying.

Do students get work experience?

Fridays are dedicated to work experience. We have good relationships with businesses all over Wellington, so it's just a matter of matching the student with the right company in the most suitable location.

How often are students on campus?

The students come in Monday – Thursday, and then Fridays are for work experience. They come in at 9 and leave at 3. It makes it an easy transition for high school leavers, and for any older students with kids, it works well around school drop-off and pick-up times.

We always get a real mix of students enrol for this course, which is great to see. On average about a third of our students are female, but last trimester, it was up to half! The average age of our students is around 20-25, but some are as young as 17, and the oldest I've taught was in their forties.

How do you find being a female in a male-dominated industry?

I think it's super helpful for our students to see a female tutor, because the girls get to see some female representation, and the boys get a better idea of the diversity in the industry. It's not all males out there anymore, there's a growing number of women in the painting industry.

What pathways are there for students?

After students complete this programme, our hope is that they get into a company straight away. Their work experience usually sets them up well for this. If the company then offers them an apprenticeship, they'll go on to complete the National Certificate in Painting and Decorating (Level 4) with BCITO, which is delivered in partnership with us. So if all things go well, I get to see students back on campus shortly after graduating!
